In Thibet, again, trade is Ng-chau is admirably adapted to be the cen-Salween and Yunzaleen, and, crossing the Salween, would then go on to the river! Thoungyeen, which borders the Siamese Shan territory. The banks of this river would then be followed to the mouth of Mainglon-Chinese and Thibetan Authorities have done gree, whence the line would be carried their utmost to been out the Indian traders vid Muang Haut to Zimme, From the water-shed of the Mopong and Me La, near Zimme, the line runs through an undulating chuen. The King of Burmah, moreover, East River districts to the eastward and the plain to King Hai, near the boundary of who has always retained for himself the important and wealthy San-tak towns to the the Independent Shan territory. Thence, crossing the Me Khok, it would follow has proved an impassable barrier to the the Teun-chun creek to the stopping place or the bank of that stream to Kiang opening of communication with Yunnan, rendezvous at the Bogue. As an alternative Hung, distant from Moulmain 625 ! miles, and from Esmok about 60 or 70 miles. The route is said to be a thoroughly practicable one, and Mr. Colqueous, who is a civil engineer, says that no very serious obstacles would have to be overcome in its construction. In his recent work "Across Chrysé," Mr. Colqueoun thus sums up the reasons for and advantages to be derived from the projected railway :-

 That British Burman has increased enormously both in trade and population, since our acquiremen 2.—That the great expansion of trade has occurred since 1868, when the first great work for opening up the country, vis., the Irrawadi Flotilla Company,

2.—That no railway was opened in the province till

4 .- That both the railway and the steamer comfirms have negotiated with Government for their purchase, and the offer has been refused.

7.—That any railway passing from west to east, north of latitude 17 ° 50° is impracticable. 8.—That the railway new proposed from Rangoon to King-hung is not only practicable, but will meet way prove a check to the French movements

9.—That the great want of Burmah is population.

10.—That not Indian immigration, but Chinese and Shan should be looked for. 11.-That the only way to encourage such immigra-12.-That the Shan country per se is well worthy

But we feel confident

15 .- That the Shan race is a friendly, industrious, India and China will, through Burmab, be Mr. Colquious shows very excellent grounds for his belief that the railway be proposes would pay. The province of Tenasserim, British Burmah, has made enormone progress during the last half century. The population has risen from 70,000 to 595,740, and the trade in similar or even TRADE PROSPECTS ON THE RIVERS greater proportion. The Irrawadi Flotilla Company, which, when formed in 1868, only possessed two or three old Government steamers and flats, now owns 29 fine steamers and 44 flats. This floot carries annually between British and Independent Burmah goods to the value of about three and a half millions sterling and some fifty thousand passengers. The Shan States have hardly, as yet, been tapped at all, and it is confidently believed that they only require some outlet in order to become large producers of various goods and consumers of foreign manufactured articles. The railway from Rangoon to Prome on the Irrawadia which was commenced in 1875 and opened to traffic in 1878, although labouring under the drawback of a deficiency in rolling stock, has returned 41 per cent. interest on capital, and will probably soon yield a much better dividend. It must be remembered also, that that line follows a route parallel with the Irrawadi, which is already well served by the Flotilla Company. The line projected by Mr. Conqueous to connect Maulmain with Yunnan will have no competing river; but will run through a country where there are neither navigable rivers nor good roads, where communication is slow and difficult, being effected either by means of elephants, pack animals, or on the shoulders of molies. There is every prospect of the railway proving remunerative even if it were dependent alone on the country through which it passes, for it would the precious metals, while in return the administration, would reap untold benefits people would prove customers for the productions of Manchester and Birmingham. It is possible, may probable, that this Colony struction of Mr. Colounoun's proposed railway, but British commerce generally-and the British provinces of Burmab in particular-would reap substantial advantages,

OF SOUTH CHINA.

In preceding articles we have directed attention to Mr. Coronnoun's remarks on the feasibility of constructing a railway to tap Messrs. D. Battonice, F. D. Sassoon, W. H. Forbes, the trade of Yunnan from the westward and southward vid India and British Burmah. Looking at matters from a Hongkong point of view, Mr. COLBORNE BABBE'S observations on the same subject have, however, a still more practical value. The Saigon has brought further news from Tonguin. The troops are marched out daily. The column is generally composed of three companies of marine infantry, one or two companies of Annamite tirailleurs, and a battery of artillary. Everything is quiet, and these movements are made simply for the sake of health and exercise. Even at the Baxiang post the enemy is never seen. The Algerian troops or Turoos in their gay and picturesqué uniform have created quite a sensation among the native population. These danntless sons of the desert have already become a terror to the country; I only hope that they will inspire equal terror among the Black Flags, whose acquaintance they cannot make too scon. Hai-duong, the capital of the province, was attacked, on the 12th inst., by a strong force of robbers and pirates, who sacked the whole town. The garrison did not turn out; probably from a belief that resistance to so large a body would be hopeless, for the enemy mustered more than a thousand strong. The pirates therefore had it all their own way, and barned and pillaged to their hearts' content. The Chinese here my that Hai-duong is atterly rained, but I hear, on the other hand, that no lives were lost; the pirates not meeting any resistance contented thomselves with looting all the movesble proporty and burning all the rest.

It is only a few years since the French colonies were subject to a regime known as the colonial pact, a regime which still exists for certain English colonies, and which, under certain restrictions, is still in force in Manila and Java. coording to the terms of this past the colonies were bound to obtain whatever European produsts they required in the mother country, and, reciprocally, to send to the home markets their native products, which were admitted under a traiff framed in their favour. Merchandise of foreign origin were not only subjected to enormone dues, but was even absolutely interdicted in many cases. Only French ships could carry colonial merchandise
